

The Danish minister of foreign affairs visited Expanite at Hannover Messen.

The Danish Minister of foreign affairs, Anders Samuelsen visited Expanite at the Hannover Messen

The Foreign Minister took the time to visit Expanite and talk to Claus Løndal, European Sales Director at Expanite. He was thoroughly introduced to Expanite and its patented surface hardening technology, which achieve unprecedented results within hardening of stainless steel.

Further the Foreign Minister was excited and impressed to learn about the strong growth and expansion that Expanite has been through and will continue fx. with the expansion of a treatment centre in Germany and also extending towards Asia.

Anders Samuelsen emphasized in his opening speech how important is that Denmark take the leading position in production and quality as well as research, innovation and development. Expanite is therefore a great example for the minister, an example of a company that originates from DTU, arising in private and public sector and rapidly evolving into a worldwide company of international interest, precisely the type of business the minister pointed out as crucial to secure growth in Denmark.

The Expanite technology

With the patented process” SuperExpanite”, it’s possible to increase the surface hardness of stainless steels by up to 10 times, while maintaining or even enhancing corrosion resistance. This method is considered unique since it’s suitable for austenitic-, ferritic-, martensitic and duplex stainless steels. Parts can be treated with extremely short lead times—a few days—which is previously unseen within surface hardening of stainless steel.

About Expanite

Expanite was founded in 2010 by leading scientists within surface hardening of steel and stainless steel from the Technical University of Denmark (DTU). Expanite has a combined development and production facility near Copenhagen, Denmark, and operates service centres in the USA and Germany. Read more: www.expanite.com
